

Dan Israel has a varied background spanning multiple disciplines. He entered his Real Estate and Finance career in the 1970's wherein his activities encompassed Residential, Industrial and Commercial Real Estate. He also Invested and worked with partners in the 80's structuring partnerships and syndications. His experience spans research and market demographics, brokerage, construction, remodeling, development and investment both privately for his own account and publicly in joint ventures. Dan has also been engaged as a consulting engineer, having been involved with industry interfacing with numerous processes and systems, he also has experience in production, manufacturing, marketing and publishing. Dan also compliments his skills in the construction trades. Dan Iso has been deeply involved in the study and research of Scripture. He has been an associate with Institute for Scripture Research and is directly involved with SOS International Ministries. He is an author and has also published other works pertaining to Scripture and economics.

Dan speaks to the issue of Scriptural Economics and has spoken before general audiences, at conferences and before clergy.