

About 'Dave from Texas'

Exploring the frequencies of his shortwave radio many years ago, Dave from Texas claims to have stumbled onto a mind changing experience – The Power Hour radio show. Spurred by Joyce Riley's mantra, "It's all about the truth", he began his journey beyond the darkening shadows of 'mainstream' media, choosing instead to hear and speak with some of the world's most intelligent people, catching for the first time a glimpse behind the curtain of lies and deception that blared from his television during the nightly news.

Leaving behind a professional career that spanned decades as a broadcaster, mechanical engineer, newspaper columnist and writer, he built a small cabin in the remote woods of northeast Texas where he's sworn to live until his last breath. Now devoting his last days to the passion of his life, he writes short stories of 'gentle persuasion', with enough humor, satire and provocation between the lines to capture his readers' attention. He tells me his television has been collecting dust for the last ten years in the far corner of his cluttered garage. Though facing a terminal illness, he's agreed to contribute his final efforts to the Power Hour Nation, appearing 'on-air' from time to time while writing – as his health allows – a regular feature on The Power Hour website.
